Santa Suits on the Water: Why the Sussex Inlet Santa Paddle Brings the Shoalhaven Together

A festive day out with real local impact — and the perfect excuse for a weekend stay

Each December, the usually calm waters of Sussex Inlet come alive with bright red suits, paddles, and laughter. It's not a holiday ad or a quirky tourist attraction — it's the Sussex Inlet Santa Paddle, and it's back for its eighth year on Saturday, 6 December 2025.

This isn't a gimmick; it's become one of the Shoalhaven's most talked-about local events, and for good reason. The paddle raises money for essential community services, it gets locals out on the water. And it brings visitors into town — many of whom stick around, eat local, stay the night, and come back again.

Organised by Madeline Rayner, the owner of Sussex Inlet Stand Up Paddle, the event has grown from a grassroots idea to a mainstay of the region's summer calendar. "The Santa Paddle has always been about community spirit — coming together on the water to celebrate, have fun, and give back to the people who make Sussex Inlet great," says Madeline.

Hundreds of Santas Take Over the River in Sussex!

Watch on YouTube

Here's how the day works

You dress up in a Santa suit. You grab a paddleboard, kayak or canoe. You join a crowd of locals and visitors floating down the river. You laugh. You cheer. You raise money. You enjoy it.

It kicks off at 9.30am at Lakehaven Reserve, with the official paddle starting at 10.45am.

The route winds down the inlet and wraps up at Swordfish Brewing, where the party continues with:

- Live music from Glenn Whitehall
- A BBQ and drinks
- Team relays
- Santa jousting (yes, really)
- Prizes for best dressed and team spirit

All watercraft are welcome. Paddleboards, kayaks, canoes — if it floats and you can paddle it, you're in.

Register here via the Sussex Inlet website.

Two local causes that need support

The event raises funds for:

- Sussex Inlet Marine Rescue — an all-volunteer team that patrols and responds to emergencies across 90 kilometres of local waterways. They're not government funded. Events like this keep their boats on the water.
- The Sussex Inlet Foundation for Community Development's Youth Programs — these run through the local Neighbourhood Centre and include school holiday activities, youth projects, and efforts to improve the local skatepark.

If you've ever been helped on the water, or seen what a good youth program can do, you'll understand why this matters.

Where to go, what to bring

Start location: Lakehaven Reserve, Sussex Inlet

Finish location: Swordfish Brewing

Time: 9.30am to 2.30pm (paddle starts at 10.45am; music continues until 4.30pm)

Bring:

- Santa outfit (or anything festive)
- Paddleboard, kayak or canoe
- Life jacket
- Sunscreen
- Water bottle
- A dry change of clothes

You can also hire equipment locally — just get in early.

Visiting from outside Shoalhaven? Stay the night

If you're not a local, this is your reason to come down for the weekend.

Sussex Inlet sits on the NSW South Coast. It's known for quiet waterways, access to ocean beaches, and an easygoing pace. You'll find riverside cabins, motels, holiday homes, and campgrounds — many just a short walk, or paddle from the town centre.

Check out the local guide at Destination Shoalhaven for places to stay, eat, and explore.

Here's a simple itinerary:

Friday — Arrive, check into a cabin or riverside motel. Grab fish and chips from a local takeaway. Watch the sunset by the water.

Saturday — Paddle in the event, join the party at Swordfish Brewing, explore the river trails.

Sunday — Walk the Lions Park Foreshore Walk, kayak in the early morning, or visit nearby Cudmirrah Beach.

For families, there's plenty to do. For couples, it's a quiet getaway. For groups of friends, it's a good excuse to reconnect.

Why it's worth showing up

The Sussex Inlet Santa Paddle is more than a photo opportunity. It's a chance to show up for the place you live in — or the place you love to visit.

This event puts real money into services locals rely on: rescue crews on the water and programs for young people who need support.

If you're from the area, bring your kayak, grab a Santa hat, and be part of something fun that actually matters.

If you're from out of town, this is the weekend to come and stay. Book a bed. Grab lunch by the water. Meet the people who live here. Spend time on the river. You'll see what locals already know — Sussex Inlet has a lot going for it.

The event is organised by people who live here, backed by local business, and run on community effort.

It's not a show. It's part of life here.

So bring your mates. Or bring your family. You'll get fresh air, some laughs, and a proper reason to be out on the water.

302 Santas Hit the Water for an Epic Sussex Santa Paddle!

What an epic day! The Sussex Santa Paddle 2025 brought the Inlet to life with 302 Santas paddling, splashing, wobbling and laughing their way along the water — all in support of two great local causes. A huge thank you to everyone who took part, cheered from the sidelines, or helped make the event possible. The mix of big smiles, big spills, and plenty of festive spirit made it a day Sussex will remember.

Old Salt Guest Chef Event at Ellmoos Centre

A special one-night-only dining experience is coming to Sussex Inlet this March, with Old Salt Distillery bringing their signature open-flame cooking to the Ellmoos Centre.

On Thursday, 19 March 2026 (6:00 PM – 9:00 PM), guests will enjoy a relaxed, three-course, share-style menu celebrating Australian produce, bold flavours, and dishes cooked over local firewood. The evening begins with a complimentary Old Salt cocktail on arrival, with guests able to choose between a Blood Orange & Passionfruit Spritz or a Limoncello Spritz, both made in small batches using Australian-grown citrus.

Menu highlights (subject to seasonal availability) include whipped feta and French onion dips, chicken liver parfait with local artisan breads, 18-hour BBQ lamb, BBQ chicken with roasted tomato and garlic, duck fat potatoes, seasonal greens, BBQ carrots with soft cheese and chimichurri, followed by desserts such as pear frangipane tart and passionfruit cheesecake (desserts not gluten free).

With over two decades of experience in top Sydney kitchens, the Old Salt team now call the Shoalhaven home, focusing on food and drinks inspired by Australian produce and open-fire cooking. This special dinner brings some of their favourite dishes to Sussex Inlet for one night only.
